BENGAL SECRETARIAT PRESS, CALCUTTA.

PREFACE.

THESE lists of Inscriptions on Tombs or Monuments in Bengal posse Historical or Archæological interest have been compiled at the instance o Secretary of State for India in Council under the orders and direction of Hon'ble Sir C. A. Elliott, K.C.S.I., Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

The utility and interest of such lists is admitted, and in the first-half of th present century more than one attempt was made by private enterprise to form a record of the monumental inscriptions of British India, the latest being the Bengal Obituary published by Holmes and Company, the Cossitollah Undertakers in 1848. As regards the churches and graveyards of Calcutta, this list is full and valuable, but as regards mufassal monuments and inscriptions it is unfortunately very imperfect. The compilers seem to have depended on contributions from correspondents, and these were apparently exceedingly superficial. Since then no publication of the kind has been attempted, and it has long been felt that the work of collecting the inscriptions of British India is one which might well be undertaken by Government. "Why," wrote a distinguished Civilian in 1892, "why should there not be a Corpus Inscriptionum Indicæ Britannicæ, giving the epitaphs of the men who lived and died to build up British India? They would be better reading than the bland platitudes of Asoka . . . . It is time that something should be done, for not only are many inscriptions becoming illegible, but, not to speak of tablets which have been converted into curry-stones, monuments are always being carried away by those grim wolves, the rivers of Bengal, who with privy paws daily devour apace, and nothing said."

The materials for this, the first collection of obituary and commemorative inscriptions published by the Government of Bengal, were originally brought together by the Public Works Department, a special officer being deputed for the work. The inscriptions thus collected were then given to me to edit. Following suggestions made by Sir Charles Elliott, I have recast the form of the lists and sifted and re-arranged the materials. The collection has been divided into two parts. The first part contains the Calcutta inscriptions grouped in sixteen sections. The second part contains the rest of the inscriptions occurring in the Lower Provinces grouped according to Divisions. In Calcutta, where the inscriptions are very numerous, only a small proportion, comprising those of most interest and importance, could be given a place in the record. In the case of inscriptions on tombs or monuments outside Calcutta, the selection has been less rigid. In fact, the further a monument is from Calcutta, the more readily I have admitted it, considering that remoteness is in itself an interesting circumstance which gives it a sufficient claim.

This is a first edition. The lists will undoubtedly require revision as well as additions, and the Public Works Department will be very glad to receive suggestions for the improvement of the work. Even as it stands, it seems to me an impressive record. A man must be strangely constituted indeed who can read the names contained in these pages and not feel some of the emotion which finds expression in the noble obituary speech of Pericles. We, too, can say with even greater truth than the Athenian that our race has not left itself without a witness, for we too have set forth our power with mighty signs and have forced every sea and every land to give way to our daring. "For such a state as this have these men nobly fought and died, vindicating its just title to unimpaired rights, and in the service of such a state we who remain here, should be glad to toil."

C. R. WILSON.

His head is bent, his right hand is on his breast, his left grasps the top of a closed book which rests on the cushion. His coat of arms as Bishop of Calcutta is carved in front beneath the cushion. The statue was originally in St. John's Church. Heber was consecrated second Bishop of Calcutta in 1823, and died suddenly at Trichinopoly on 3rd April 1826. Sir William Hay Macnaghten, Bart. —concluded.	action by high and generous impulses, alike conducive to good and great results and to honourable distinction: thus, that character became developed, whose excellence, acknowledged without dissent, was regarded without envy, from the modesty which embellished it. Entrusted during a long course of arduous service with confidential authority, he advanced the reputation he had early established: until, whilst Envoy at the Court of Cabul, honoured by his Sovereign; and on the eve of assuming the Government of Bombay; his bright career of earthly usefulness was arrested. Revolt had burst forth upon the land: and on the 23rd day of December 1841, in the summer of his manhood and his fortunes, in the forty-eighth year of his age, he fell by the hand of an assassin. His public acts will be found recorded in the annals of his country: this memorial is the last tribute permitted to private friendship.	whom on each side is seen the figure of a crouching lion. To the right is a Hindu with the fingers of his left hand in the lion's name; to the left is a Mussulman with his right leg crossed in front of his left, his right knee resting on the lion's head. Above the tablet is Macnaghten's coat of arms with his motto, "Hope in God." The whole is surmounted by a figure of Macnaghten in relief, seated in a chair, and turned towards the right of the spectator. See also the inscription on his tomb in the Lower Circular Road Cemetery.
3	19 April 1848.	Patrick Alexander Vans Agnew, B.C.S., and William Anderson.	Not near this stone, nor in any consecrated ground, but on the extreme frontier of the British Indian Empire, lie the remains of PATRICK ALEXANDER VANS AGNEW, of the Bengal Civil Service, and WILLIAM ANDERSON, Lieutenant, 1st Bombay Fusilier Regiment, Assistants to the Resident at Lahore; who being deputed by the Government to relieve, at his own request, Dewan Moolraj, Viceroy of Multan, of the fortress and authority which he held, were attacked and wounded by the Garrison, on the 19th April 1848, and being treacherously deserted by the Sikh escort, were on the following day, in flagrant breach of national faith and hospitality, barbarously murdered in the Edgah, under the Walls of Multan. Thus fell these two young public servants at the age of 25 and 28 years, full of high hopes, rare talents, and promise of future usefulness; even in their deaths doing their country honour: wounded and forsaken they could offer no resistance; but hand in hand calmly awaited the onset of their assailants; nobly they refused to yield, foretelling the day when thousands of Englishmen should come to avenge their death, and destroy Moolraj, his army and fortress. History records how the prediction was fulfilled. They were buried with Military Honours on the summit of the captured citadel on the 26th January 1849. The annexation of the Punjab to the British Empire was the result of the war, of which their assassination was the commencement. The Assistants to the Resident at Lahore have erected this monument to the memory of their friends.	A mural tablet. There is a tablet to the memory of Vans Agnew and Anderson in the Idgah at Multan. Their bodies were buried not far from the mausoleum of Bahawal Hak. The spot is marked by an obelisk 50 feet high. It bears the same inscription as here, except that the opening words are "Beneath this monument lie the remains." The inscription is said to have been written by Lord Macaulay.

Born at Lasswade, N.B., 31st December 1818. He came to India in 1838. Already distinguished in the two Sikh wars, his conduct on the outbreak of revolt in 1857 showed what a clear apprehension, a brave heart, and a hopeful spirit could effect, with scanty means, in crushing disorder. Called to Delhi as Chief Engineer, his bold and ready judgment, his weighty and tenacious counsels, played a foremost part in securing the success of the siege, and England's supremacy; and the gathered wisdom of many years spent in administering the irrigation of Upper India trained him for his crowning service in the survey of the great famine of 1861, the provision of relief, and the suggestion of safeguard against such calamities. Broken by accumulated labours, he died at sea, December 13th 1861, aged scarcely 43. At Madras, where his career began, his body awaits the resurrection unto life, whilst here the regard and admiration of British India erects this cenotaph in honour of his virtues and his public services.	A cenotaph with an inlaid cross, surmounted by a Gothic canopy. Under the canopy behind the cenotaph is a large sculptured alabaster panel, representing the resurrection of Christ from the dead. Colonel Baird Smith's wife was Florence DeQuincey, the second daughter of the celebrated writer.

A memorial of the affection of friends and fellow citizens for WILLIAM RITCHIE of the Calcutta Bar and Inner Temple, Member of the Council of the Governor-General, Vice-Chancellor of the University, and twenty years a resident in Calcutta. To a clear intellect and sweet and generous temper, England had added her highest education and God his grace. Public-spirited, wise, and beloved, his career was one of rare success, breeding no envy. His death was felt to be a calamity alike public and private, and carried grief into many households, but left to all who mourn him the bright assurance of his rest in Christ. He died in Calcutta, 22nd March A.D. 1862, in his 46th year. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours: and their works do follow them." Rev., Chap. XIV, Ver. 13.	A marble monument by J. H. Foley. On each side of the pedestal, supporting a bust of Ritchie, are full-length figures: that on the right represents Law, and the other on the left Religion. Within this is a marble medallion portrait of Lord Elgin, and beneath it are four bronze panels representing the principal events in his career in "Jamaica," "Canada," "China," and "India."

			profession to which he belonged. By his heroic intrepidity in the arduous contest between the British troops and those of the Raja of Nepaul in the years 1814 and 1815, he obtained the unqualified approbation of the Supreme Government of India and the honour of the Bath from his Sovereign. His life fell a sacrifice to the energy of his spirit, which led him into the field at the head of his division whilst suffering under a painful and dangerous illness, under which he sank in camp, at Baroda, on the 22nd of September 1821, in the 44th year of his age. Just and inflexibly firm, yet temperate and mild in the exercise of his authority, he ensured the respect whilst he conciliated the attachment of the troops under his command. Quantrill, of the 5th Regiment, Bengal Light Cavalry, with almost the entire of the 3rd, 4th, 5th and 6th troops of the corps, fell in gallant but hopeless conflict in the disastrous retreat from Cabul between the 6th and 13th of January 1842. The surviving officers of the regiment erect this tablet. The lamented brave, whose deaths it records, though greatly outnumbered by a most treacherous foe in snowy wastes and rugged defiles for several days and nights together without the shelter even of a tent, and suffering from the extremes of cold, hunger and thirst, in the depth of an Afghan winter, sold their lives dearly as became British soldiers. "How are the mighty fallen and the weapons of war perished." II Sam., V. 27.

115	12 Jan. 1842.	Thomas John Anquetil.	In testimony of affection and regret, this tablet is dedicated to the memory of Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas John Anquetil, 44th Regiment, Bengal Native Infantry, who was massacred in the performance of his duty during the insurrection at Jugdulluck, in Afghanistan, at Cabul, while commanding Shah Suja's force on the 12th January 1842, aged 60 years. 116	7 April 1842.	William Henry Dennie.	In memory of Colonel W. H. Dennie, c.b., of Her Majesty's 13th Light Infantry, who fell when leading a column upon the Afghan force under Akbar Khan, before Jellalabad, 7th April 1842. Colonel Dennie served under Lord Lake in 1805 and 1806. During the Burmese war he twice distinguished himself. At Ghuznee on the 23rd July 1839 he led successfully the attack at Bamean; on the 18th September 1840 he defeated Dost Mahomed in the Khoord Cabul Pass; on the 12th October 1841, after Major-General Sir R. Sale was wounded, he directed the movements in a spirited manner. At Tazeen and Jugdulluck on the 22nd and 29th October 1841 and between Gundamuck and Jellalabad on the 12th November 1841 he sustained his military reputation. At Jellalabad on the 1st December 1841 and 11th March 1842 he led two successful sorties. This tablet is erected by the Commander-in-Chief and officers of Her Majesty's army in India, to record the deeds of a brave soldier.	Fierce, fiery, romantically chivalrous, Dennie was not only one of the bravest of our soldiers, but also as good an officer as any that served through the war in Afghanistan. He predicted the disaster to Elphinstone's Army, even the receipt of the tidings by a solitary survivor.

Johannes.* This noble and wise man, who was cut down in twain by the keen sword of death, was of a rather meek and humble disposition; he was ever generous and charitable to the poor and the needy, like Tobit of old. His mortal remains were placed in this narrow ditch on the completion of his 73rd year, on 17th Lamar 1812 A. D. Then, oh all you people, take this meet advice, never to put your trust in this vain and transitory life, but rather let your thoughts concentrate on the amassing of such treasures that will never corrupt and rust.

230	26 Feb. 1852.	Arratoon Catchick	Echo. To thee are my words, oh, thou passer-by, who may chance to fix your gaze at this spot. I, Arratoon Catchick, a follower of the Saviour, was born in the great City of Ispahan, and leaving my native country in early life came out to India for the purpose of trade. It chanced that at one time I was at Syedabad, where I was married in accordance with the rites and ceremonies of our Holy Church. Annie was the name of my wife, who was adorned with heavenly graces. She bore me children like angels, who praised the glory of the Lord. Oh how great a joy they were to us, when they would wake up at dawn, to glorify the Lord with songs of praise, whereby they would fill our home with all that was good! But, alas! inconstant and cruel destiny spares not even the tender years of youth, for the unendurable gall of death fell on our dear children, on whom the skill of all medical treatment proved of no avail. Forty days rolled by, and ruthless death snatched from our arms our beloved pair of turtle-doves for whose irreparable loss my devoted wife, through excessive grief, succumbed to consumption, and she soon went to her rest, and leaving this world, departed to associate with the saints above. Then I who was left alone asked the Lord in my weakness to give rest to my soul, who, having compassion on me, sent anon his angel after my soul, in answer to the prayers of unhappy me, and into whose hands I yielded my soul with all faith, humbly asking remission for my innumerable sins, and my body remains here in this secret abode to rise again on the day of resurrection. Now the end of my painful life took place in the year one thousand and eight hundred, plus fifty-two, on the twenty-sixth day of the month of February, on the day of the Feast of Simeon the Old, who was happy to exchange life with death, The days of my life being 82 years, of which deduct 38 days only. Born at Julfa in Ispahan on the 6th April, 1770 A. D. Died at Calcutta on the 26th February 1852 A. D.

			What is your mind amazed at? Such is the end of wordly gifts: We, husband and wife, who were in the enjoyment of happiness and glory, Fell to the ground like flowers, wounded by the arrow of death. Take thou this as an example, to weigh thine years in this balance.	The original of this rather lengthy inscription is composed in metrical verse of "ten metres," in which I have translated the first two lines of the inscription which forms a "distich," and which serves as a prologue to the pathetic epitaph of 51 lines in the original, and in which is embodied a concise biographical sketch of a special interest. The last four lines, meant as an edification, are sculptured in the four ornamental margins of the tombstone, measuring seven feet by four feet, and is in a fair state of preservation. [M. J. S.]

His soul glowed with the love of his dear Redeemer and with a longing of His heavenly kingdom. His charity to the orphans, the widow, to charitable, benevolent, and scholastic institutions knew no bounds. His Christian and moral virtues shall ever endear his memory to his relatives, to his friends, and to all his acquaintance. "Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." What needs the Emblem, what the plaintive strain, What all the Art, that sculpture e'er express'd To tell the Treasure, that these Walls contain. Let those declared it most, who knew it Best. The tender Pity she would oft betray Shall be with interest at her Shrine return'd Connubial Love connubial Tears repay, And Lucia lov'd shall still be Lucia mourn'd. "Chambers," he wrote in 1774, "is gone far, and poor Goldsmith is gone much farther." Sir W. This humble stone records y^e^ name and Fate (the latter alas how unequal to his worth!) of Richard Becher, Esqr., late member of y^e^ Board of Trade, & once of y^e^ Council of this Presidency. Thro a long life pass'd in the service y^e^ Company, what his conduct was the annals of y^e^ Company will show; On this tablet sorrowing friendship tells, that having reach'd, in a modest independence, what he deem'd the honorable reward of a life of service, to enjoy it, He return'd, in y^e^ year 1771 to his Native Land, where private esteem and public confidence awaited, but where Misfortune also overtook, him. By Nature open, liberal, & compassionate, Unpractised in Guile himself, & not suspecting it in others, To prop y^e^ declining Credit of a friend, He was led to put his all to hazard, and fell the Victim of his own benevolence. After a short Pause and agonizing Conflict, Roused by domestic Claims to fresh exertions in 1781, he returned to y^e^ Scene of his earlier Efforts. But y^e^ vigour of life was passed, and seeing, thro' ye^e^ Calamity of y^e^ Times, his prospects darken in y^e^ hopeless efforts to re-erect y^e^ Fortunes of his Family, Under y^e^ pang of Disappointment and y^e^ Pressure of y^e^ climate, a worn Mind and debilitated Body, Sunk to Rest. Unerring Wisdom ordained that his reward should not be of this World, and removed him to an Eternity of Happiness. 17th Novr. 1782. Ætatis Suæ. 61.	See also No. 72. "Richard Becher will ever deserve honor as almost the only Englishman who, amid calamity and misrepresentation, really strove to grapple with the great famine of 1770." His two sons, Richard and John, came out to Bengal in 1781 in the Civil Service. "It was a daughter of John Becher who became the wife of Richmond Thackeray and the mother of his illustrious son. ..... I wonder if Thackeray had that sad story of his great-grandfather in his mind, when he touched off with so tender a pencil, the last days of Colonel Newcome." (Sir W. W. Hunter.)

		Augustus Cleveland —continued.	The public & private virtues of this excellent Young Man were Singularly eminent. In his public capacity he accomplished, by a system of conciliation, what could never be effected by Military Coercion; he civilized a savage race of Mountaineers, who, for Ages, had existed in a state of barbarism, and eluded every exertion that had been practised against them to suppress their depredations and reduce them to obedience. To his wise and beneficent conduct the English East India Company were indebted for the subjecting to their Government the numerous inhabitants of that wild and extensive country the jungleterry. In his private station, by the amiableness of his deportment, the gentleness of his manner, and the goodness and generosity of his heart, he was universally admired, beloved, and respected by all who had the happiness of knowing him.

Those who had the happiness of his Friendship, saw human Nature in its most amiable form, for he was a kind and tender Husband, a fond and careful Father, the warm patron of those he protected, and the Friend of all Mankind. In his political Character, which will be best learned from the pages of History, he was an upright, just, and honest man, and as his disinterested Conduct gained the esteem of all Ranks of men; so in their Memory he is honored, beloved, lamented. In September his health began to decline, and after a few weeks' illness, he died on the 10th of October, in the year of Our Lord 1784. Aged fifty-one. 2.—PRINSEP'S GHAT.

408	22nd Apl. 1840.	James Prinsep ...	Erected to the honor of James Prinsep by his fellow citizens.	Secretary to the Asiatic Society of Bengal and Assay Master in the Mint. He deciphered the Asoka inscriptions.

3.—COLLEGE SQUARE.

409	1st June 1842.	David Hare ...	This tomb, erected by his native friends and pupils, encloses the mortal remains of David Hare. He was a native of Scotland, and came to this city in the year 1800 and died 1st June 1842, aged 67. After acquiring a competence by probity and industry in his calling as a watch-maker, he adopted for his own the country of his sojourn, and cheerfully devoted the remainder of his life with unwearing zeal and benevolence to one pervading and darling object, on which he spared no personal trouble, money or influence, viz., "the education and moral improvement of the natives of Bengal," thousands of whom regarded him in life with filial love and reverence, and lament him in death as their best and most disinterested friend, who was to them even as a father.	A stone column on a stone base to mark the site of the grave of David Hare, situated on the south side of College Square.
